
The communication tools we use every day, such as social media and the internet, have created a huge divide between cultures. Misinformation and fake news can lead to misunderstanding between people who are not otherwise familiar with one another. This has led to a drastic increase in xenophobia, racism, sexism, violence against others, and other problems that stem from this misunderstanding. Indonesia's SMA Kabar Ba'un now uses e-books as an effective tool for teaching values to teachers and students alike by explaining what is happening around the world through various stories. The books are modern and informative, but also have a touch of humor to the stories. They are likely to engage more readers. They have been published by SMA Kabar Ba'un for more than 7 years and have been used across the country. Komunikasi lintas budaya De De Mulyana is a Master's degree thesis from 2015 by Teknologi dan Keuangan Publication House which was intended to serve as a solution for current communication methods used in Indonesian society. Its major aim was research of communication methodologies of social media in Indonesia through the dialogue of technologically-advanced countries such as USA (United States of America), UK (United Kingdom) and Australia. The book discusses what Indonesian society needs in its communication methodologies that Indonesian social media has failed to provide, such as fairness and justice.
